Approved For Branch Control Co
PLACE ACQUIRED BATE OF NIFO. 1. Nguyen Binh, aka Nguyen Phuong Thao, was criginally named commander—inchef of Democratic Resultion of Victum (NRV) forces in South Victum to the popular with the marking one as commander of Victums (not Dan Dang forces. Contrary to DRV expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh urowed an excellent commander of Victums (not Dan Dang forces. Contrary to DRV expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh urowed an excellent commander of Victums (not Dang Dang forces. Contrary to DRV expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh urowed an excellent commander of Victums (POI) Politics (POI) Politi	\mathcal{A}
PLACE ACQUIRED DATE OF NNPO. 1. Nguyen Binh, aka Nguyen Phuong Thao, was originally named commender—inchelef of Democratic Resultion of Victuma (NRV) forces in Scuth Victuma to remove him from North Victuma where he had became extremely popular with the population of the maritire zone as commander of Victuma Quoc Dan Dang forces. Contrary to DNP expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh unowed an excellent commander and in 1948 to Duan was dispatched to the south as Communist Party of Indochina (PCI) Political Commisser with the mission of emcelling him in the party. Nguyen Van Tri, a long-standing PCI member, was also sent to "outh Victuma to surveil Binh's activities. Still uncertain of Binh's loyalties, however, the IRV dispatched Ceneral Chu Van Ten, accommended by a regiment of troops from the north, to relieve him of his post. 2. Binh's recall to North Victuan was the direct result of a report submitted to DNY headourters by Le Duan, accusing him of shielding Boang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment. 3. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindoctrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gla Dinh. On his arrival in Gla Dinh, however, The used the more to current and the record of the 303 Regiment. For the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, The sought refuse a Ruyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector II. FCI members in Binh's entourage recorted the 's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with The was then reported to the FCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Heang The was charged with the murder of a DRY Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit He Chi If the piesters.	41
PLACE ACQUIRED DATE OF NFO. 1. Nguyen Binh, aka Nguyen Fhuong Thao, was originally named commander-inchief of Democratic Renublic of Victnam (DRV) forces in Scuth Victnam to reserve him from North Victnam where he had became extremely popular with the population of the maritime zone a commander of Vistnam quoe Ban Bang forces. Contrary to DRV expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh urvoved an excellent commander of Vistnam quoe Ban Bang forces. Contrary to DRV expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh urvoved an excellent commander and in 1948 is blann was dispatched to the south as Communist Party of Indochina (PGI) Political Commisser with the mission of enrolling him in the party. Nguyen Van Tri, a long-standing PGI member, was also sent to South Victnam to surveil Binh's activities. Still uncertain of Binh's loyalties, however, the DRV dispatched General Chu Van Tan, accommended by a regiment of troops from the north, to relieve him of his post. 2. Binh's recall to North Victnam was the direct result of a report submitted to DRV headcusters by Le Duan, accusing him of shielding licang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment, in the theft of 20,000 plasters of DRV Security Service funds. 3. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindoctrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gla Dinh. On his arrival in Gla Dinh, however, The used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, The sought refuge at Mnyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. FCI members in Binh's entourage revorted to the FCI Centrel Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Hoang The was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit No Chi M'nh piesters.
PLACE ACQUIRED DATE OF NNFO. 1. Nguyen Binh, aka Nguyen Fnuong Thao, was originally named commander—inchief of Democratic Revublic of Victnam (DRV) forces in Scuth Victnam to remove him from North Vietnam where he had became extremely popular with the population of the maritime zone as commander of Vistnam quoe Ban Bang forces. Contrary to DRV expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh proved an excellent commander of Vistnam quoe Ban Bang forces. Contrary to DRV expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh proved an excellent commander and in 1948 Le blann was dispatched to the south as Communist Party of Indochina (PGI) Political Commissar with the mission of enrolling him in the party. Nguyen Van Tri, a long-standing PGI member, was also sent to South Victnam to surveil Binh's activities. Still uncertain of Binh's loyalties, however, the DRV dispatched Ceneral Chu Van Tan, accommanded by a regiment of troops from the north, to relieve him of his post. 2. Binh's recall to North Vietnam was the direct result of a report submitted to DRV headcuarters by Le Duan, accoming him of shielding Boang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment, and he direct result of a report submitted to ERV headcuarters by Le Duan, accoming him of shielding Boang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment, in the theft of 20,000 plasters of ERV Security Service funds. 3. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindoctrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gla Dinh. On his arrival in Gia Dinh, however, The used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, Tho sought refuge at Muyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage revorted to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Hoang Tho was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession o
1. Nguyen Binh, aka Nguyen Phuong Thao, was originally named commander-inchief of Democratic Republic of Vietnam (RRV) forces in Scuth Vietnam to remove him from North Vietnam where he had became extremely popular with the population of the maritime zone as commander of Vietnam quoc Dan Dang forces. Contrary to ERV expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh proved an excellent commander and in 1948 Le Duan was dispatched to the south as Communist Farty of Indochina (PCI) Political Commissar with the mission of enrolling him in the party. Nguyen Van Tri, a long-standing PCI member, was also sent to South Vietnam to surveil Binh's activities, however, the ERV dispatched General Chu Van Tan, accommanded by a regiment of troops from the north, to relieve him of his post. 2. Binh's recall to North Vietnam was the direct result of a report submitted to ERV headcuarters by Le Duan, accusing him of shielding Hoang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment, 2 in the theft of 20,000 plasters of ERV Security Earlie of Binh. On his arrival in Gla Dish, however, Tho used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the ertire amount, Tho sought refuse at Nguyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage recorted Tho's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with Tho was then recorted to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the treft of the money, Hoang Tho was charged with the murder of a BRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit Ho Chi If'nh plasters.
1. Nguyen Binh, aka Nguyen Phuong Thao, was originally named commander—inchef of Democratic Remublic of Victnam (RW) forces in South Victnam to remove him from North Victnam where he had became extremely popular with the population of the maritime zone as commander of Victnam Quoc Dan Deang forces. Contrary to RW expectations that he would fail in his new sasignment, Hinh wroved an excellent commander and in 1948 Le Duan was dispatched to the south as Communist Party of Indochina (FOI) Political Commisser with the mission of enrolling him in the party. Nguyen Van Tri, a long-standing PCI member, was also sent to South Victnam to surveil Binh's activities. Still uncertain of Binh's loyalties, however, the IRV dispatched General Chu Van Tan, acommanded by a regiment of troops from the north, to relieve him of his post.\(^1\) 2. Binh's recall to North Victnam was the direct result of a report submitted to IRV headouarters by Le Duan, accusing him of shielding Hoang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment,\(^2\) in the theft of 20,000 plasters of IRV Security Service funds. 3. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindoctrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gda Dinh. On his arrival in Gla Dinh, however, The used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, Tho sought refuge at Nguyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage recorted The's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with The was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Heang The was charged with the murder of a BRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit He Chi If'nh plasters.
chief of Democratic Republic of Vietnam (DRV) forces in South Vietnam to remove him from North Vietnam where he had became extremely popular with the population of the maritime zone as commander of Vietnam Quoc Dan Dang forces. Contrary to DRV expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh proved an excellent commander and in 1948 Le Duan was dispatched to the south as Communist Party of Indochina (PCI) Political Commissar with the mission of enrolling him in the party. Nguyen Van Tri, a long-standing PCI member, was also sent to South Vietnam to surveil Binh's activities. Still uncertain of Binh's loyalties, however, the DRV dispatched General Chu Van Tan, accompanied by a regiment of troops from the north, to relieve him of his post. 2. Binh's recall to North Vietnam was the direct result of a report submitted to DRV headcuarters by Le Duan, accusing him of shielding Hoang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment, in the theft of 20,000 plasters of DRV Security Service funds. 3. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindoctrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gia Dinh. On his arrival in Gia Dinh, however, The used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, The sought refuge at Nguyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage reported The's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with The was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Heang The was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit He Chi Minh plasters.	ance!
chief of Democratic Republic of Vietnam (DRV) forces in South Vietnam to remove him from North Vietnam where he had became extremely popular with the population of the maritime zone as commander of Vietnam Quoc Dan Dang forces. Contrary to DRV expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh proved an excellent commander and in 1948 Le Duan was dispatched to the south as Communist Party of Indochina (PCI) Political Commissar with the mission of enrolling him in the party. Nguyen Van Tri, a long-standing PCI member, was also sent to South Vietnam to surveil Binh's activities. Still uncertain of Binh's loyalties, however, the DRV dispatched General Chu Van Tan, accompanied by a regiment of troops from the north, to relieve him of his post. 2. Binh's recall to North Vietnam was the direct result of a report submitted to DRV headcuarters by Le Duan, accusing him of shielding Hoang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment, in the theft of 20,000 plasters of DRV Security Service funds. 3. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindoctrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gia Dinh. On his arrival in Gia Dinh, however, The used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, The sought refuge at Nguyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage reported The's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with The was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Heang The was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit He Chi Minh plasters.
chief of Democratic Republic of Vietnam (DRV) forces in South Vietnam to remove him from North Vietnam where he had became extremely popular with the population of the maritime zone as commander of Vietnam Quoc Dan Dang forces. Contrary to DRV expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh proved an excellent commander and in 1948 Le Duan was dispatched to the south as Communist Party of Indochina (PCI) Political Commissar with the mission of enrolling him in the party. Nguyen Van Tri, a long-standing PCI member, was also sent to South Vietnam to surveil Binh's activities. Still uncertain of Binh's loyalties, however, the DRV dispatched General Chu Van Tan, accompanied by a regiment of troops from the north, to relieve him of his post. 2. Binh's recall to North Vietnam was the direct result of a report submitted to DRV headcuarters by Le Duan, accusing him of shielding Hoang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment, in the theft of 20,000 plasters of DRV Security Service funds. 3. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindoctrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gia Dinh. On his arrival in Gia Dinh, however, The used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, The sought refuge at Nauyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage reported the's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with The was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Heang The was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit He Chi Minh plasters.	7/2 mg/gr/s
chief of Democratic Republic of Vietnam (DRV) forces in South Vietnam to remove him from North Vietnam where he had became extremely popular with the population of the maritime zone as commander of Vietnam Quoc Dan Dang forces. Contrary to DRV expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh proved an excellent commander and in 1948 Le Duan was dispatched to the south as Communist Party of Indochina (PCI) Political Commissar with the mission of enrolling him in the party. Nguyen Van Tri, a long-standing PCI member, was also sent to South Vietnam to surveil Binh's activities. Still uncertain of Binh's loyalties, however, the DRV dispatched General Chu Van Tan, accompanied by a regiment of troops from the north, to relieve him of his post. 2. Binh's recall to North Vietnam was the direct result of a report submitted to DRV headcuarters by Le Duan, accusing him of shielding Hoang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment, in the theft of 20,000 plasters of DRV Security Service funds. 3. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindoctrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gia Dinh. On his arrival in Gia Dinh, however, The used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, The sought refuge at Nauyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage reported the's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with The was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Heang The was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit He Chi Minh plasters.	By side
chief of Democratic Republic of Vietnam (DRV) forces in South Vietnam to remove him from North Vietnam where he had became extremely popular with the population of the maritime zone as commander of Vietnam Quoc Dan Dang forces. Contrary to DRV expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh proved an excellent commander and in 1948 Le Duan was dispatched to the south as Communist Party of Indochina (PCI) Political Commissar with the mission of enrolling him in the party. Nguyen Van Tri, a long-standing PCI member, was also sent to South Vietnam to surveil Binh's activities. Still uncertain of Binh's loyalties, however, the DRV dispatched General Chu Van Tan, accompanied by a regiment of troops from the north, to relieve him of his post. 2. Binh's recall to North Vietnam was the direct result of a report submitted to DRV headcuarters by Le Duan, accusing him of shielding Hoang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment, in the theft of 20,000 plasters of DRV Security Service funds. 3. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindoctrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gia Dinh. On his arrival in Gia Dinh, however, The used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, The sought refuge at Nauyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage reported the's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with The was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Heang The was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit He Chi Minh plasters.
chief of Democratic Republic of Vietnam (DRV) forces in South Vietnam to remove him from North Vietnam where he had became extremely popular with the population of the maritime zone as commander of Vietnam Quoc Dan Dang forces. Contrary to DRV expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh proved an excellent commander and in 1948 Le Duan was dispatched to the south as Communist Party of Indochina (PCI) Political Commissar with the mission of enrolling him in the party. Nguyen Van Tri, a long-standing PCI member, was also sent to South Vietnam to surveil Binh's activities. Still uncertain of Binh's loyalties, however, the DRV dispatched General Chu Van Tan, accompanied by a regiment of troops from the north, to relieve him of his post. 2. Binh's recall to North Vietnam was the direct result of a report submitted to DRV headcuarters by Le Duan, accusing him of shielding Hoang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment, in the theft of 20,000 plasters of DRV Security Service funds. 3. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindoctrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gia Dinh. On his arrival in Gia Dinh, however, The used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, The sought refuge at Nauyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage reported the's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with The was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Heang The was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit He Chi Minh plasters.
chief of Democratic Republic of Vietnam (DRV) forces in Scuth Vietnam to remove him from North Vietnam where he had became extremely popular with the population of the maritime zone as commander of Vietnam Quoc Dan Dang forces. Contrary to DRV expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh proved an excellent commander and in 1948 Le Duan was dispatched to the south as Communist Party of Indochina (PCI) Political Commissar with the mission of enrolling him in the party. Nguyen Van Tri, a long-standing PCI member, was also sent to South Vietnam to surveil Binh's activities. Still uncertain of Binh's loyalties, however, the DRV dispatched General Chu Van Tan, accompanied by a regiment of troops from the north, to relieve him of his post.\frac{1}{2} 2. Binh's recall to North Vietnam was the direct result of a report submitted to DRV headcuarters by Le Duan, accusing him of shielding Hoang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment,\frac{2}{2} in the theft of 20,000 plasters of DRV Security Service funds. 3. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindoctrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gia Dinh. On his arrival in Gia Dinh, however, The used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, The sought refuge at Nauyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage reverted The's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with The was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Heang The was charged with the murder of a BRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit He Chi Minh plasters.
remove him from North Vietnam where he had became extremely popular with the population of the maritime zone as commander of Vietnam Quoc Dan Dang forces. Contrary to DRV expectations that he would fail in his new assignment, Binh proved an excellent commander and in 1948 Le Duan was dispatched to the south as Communist Party of Indochina (PCI) Political Commissar with the mission of enrolling him in the party. Nguyen Van Tri, a long-standing PCI member, was also sent to South Vietnam to surveil Binh's activities. Still uncertain of Binh's loyalties, however, the LRV dispatched General Chu Van Tan, accommanded by a regiment of troops from the north, to relieve him of his post. 2. Binh's recall to North Vietnam was the direct result of a report submitted to DRV headquarters by Le Duan, accusing him of shielding Hoang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment, 2 in the theft of 20,000 plasters of LRV Security Service funds. 3. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindoctrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gia Dinh. On his arrival in Gia Dinh, however, The used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, The sought refuge at Nauyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage reverted The's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with The was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Heang The was charged with the murder of a URV Strete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit He Chi M'nh plasters.
assignment, Binh proved an excellent commander and in 1948 Le Duan was dispatched to the south as Communist Farty of Indochina (PDI) Political Commissar with the mission of enrolling him in the party. Nguyen Van Tri, a long-standing PCI member, was also sent to South Vietnam to surveil Binh's activities. Still uncertain of Binh's loyalties, however, the LRV dispatched General Chu Van Tan, accommanied by a regiment of troops from the north, to relieve him of his post. 2. Binh's recall to North Vietnam was the direct result of a report submitted to LRV headcuarters by Le Duan, accusing him of shielding Hoang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment, in the theft of 20,000 piasters of LRV Security Service funds. 3. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindoctrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 piasters to deliver to the Surete of Gia Dinh. On his arrival in Gia Dinh, however, The used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, The sought refuge at Nguyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage reported The's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with The was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Heang The was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit He Chi Hinh plasters.	•
Commissar with the mission of enrolling him in the party. Nguyen Van Tri, a long-stanfing PCI member, was also sent to South Vietnam to surveil Binh's activities. Still uncertain of Binh's loyalties, however, the IRV dispatched General Chu Van Tan, accommanied by a regiment of troops from the north, to relieve him of his post.\(^1\) 2. Binh's recall to North Vietnam was the direct result of a report submitted to DRV headcuarters by Le Duan, accusing him of shielding Hoang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment,\(^2\) in the theft of 20,000 plasters of IRV Security Service funds. 3. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindoctrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gia Dinh. On his arrival in Gia Dinh, however, The used the meney to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, The sought refuge at Nguyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage reverted The's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with The was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Heang The was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit He Chi Minh plasters.
Binh's activities. Still uncertain of Binh's loyalties, however, the ERV dispatched General Chu Van Tan, accompanied by a regiment of troops from the north, to relieve him of his post.\frac{1}{2} Binh's recall to North Vietnam was the direct result of a report submitted to ERV headcuarters by Le Duan, accusing him of shielding Hoang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment,\frac{2}{2} in the theft of 20,000 plasters of ERV Security Service funds. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindoctrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gia Dinh. On his arrival in Gia Dinh, however, The used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, The sought refuge at Nguyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage reported The's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with The was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the treft of the money, Heang The was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit He Chi Minh plasters.
2. Binh's recall to North Vietnam was the direct result of a report submitted to DRV headcuarters by Le Duan, accusing him of shielding Hoang Tho, former commander of the 303 Regiment, in the theft of 20,000 plasters of DRV Security Service funds. 3. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindectrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gia Dinh. On his arrival in Gia Dinh, however, The used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, The sought refuge at Nguyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage reverted The's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with The was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Heang The was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit He Chi Minh plasters.	Å., commander of the 303 Regiment, 2 in the theft of 20,000 plasters of IRV Security Service funds. 3. The had been ordered to return to the north for reindoctrination, following charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gia Dinh. On his arrival in Gia Dinh, however, The used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, The sought refuge at Nguyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage reported The's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with The was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Heang The was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit He Chi Minh plasters.	- charges of insubordination, and had been given 20,000 plasters to deliver to the Surete of Gia Dinh. On his arrival in Gia Dinh, however, Tho used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, Tho sought refuge at Nguyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage reported Tho's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with Tho was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Hoang Tho was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit Ho Chi Minh plasters.
to the Surete of Gia Dinh. On his arrival in Gia Dinh, however, Tho used the money to purchase food for the troops and acquaintances he had made while serving in the area. After spending the entire amount, Tho sought refuge at Nguyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage reported Tho's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with Tho was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Hoang Tho was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit Ho Chi Minh plasters.
refuge at Nguyen Binh's headquarters in Intersector IX. PCI members in Binh's entourage reported Tho's arrival to Le Duan, and Binh's collusion with Tho was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Hoang Tho was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit Ho Chi Minh plasters.	*
with Tho was then reported to the PCI Central Committee. 4. In addition to the theft of the money, Hoang Tho was charged with the murder of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit Ho Chi Minh plasters.
of a DRV Surete agent who had bullied an old woman in possession of five French counterfeit Ho Chi Hinh plasters.
25744
25X1A 7 Pan's arrival in South Vietnem in July 1951
This is the first indication from another source that Tan may actually be in the south.	X1A
25X1A 2. Tho 's
replacement as commander of the 303 Regiment by Huynh Van Dao. CLASSIFICATION CONFIDENTIAL/CONTROL - U.S. OFFICIALS ONLY	iga eti
STATE NAVY NSRB DISTRIBUTION ARMY AIR FBL
ocument No. S
O Change In Class. Declassified Declassified Change In Class. Declassified
ass. Changed To: TS S C ass. Changed To: TS S C uth.: HR 10-2 W By: 02-5 IMMEDIATELY AFTER USE	